WE ARE

Directorate A leads and co-ordinates DIGIT's digital transformation principles, policies, and projects. It serves as the central entry point for DIGIT expertise, provides service information tailored to Commission departments' needs, supports IT governance bodies on compliance with corporate standards and assessment of new IT investments, and supplies digital business solutions that support the institution.

Unit DIGIT.A.3 drives digital transformation in HR, legislation, decision-making, document management and crisis management by designing, building, and managing end-to-end corporate digital solutions for the Commission and other EU institutions, bodies, and agencies, working closely with DIGIT services and partners in Human Resources (HR), Secretariat-General (SG) and other Directorates Generals (DGs).

WE PROPOSE

The European Crisis Management Platform (ECMP) is a programme launched through a partnership of several DGs active in the domain of crisis management, aiming to replace fragmented legacy rapid alert and early warning systems with a single, modern, centrally governed platform. DIGIT, as supplier, is building the Common Platform with its core based on reusable solutions available at the European Commission. It will provide horizontal and business functionalities relevant to crisis management, which can be leveraged by future systems based on ECMP through configuration.

The ECMP programme brings together multiple crisis management systems currently used across different European Commission departments into a single shared platform. These systems support a wide range of crisis scenarios, from nuclear safety and food safety alerts to health emergencies and internal market disruptions. By consolidating them under one common infrastructure, ECMP enables better data exchange between services, improved situational awareness during crises, consistent use of terminology, and lower development and maintenance costs.

As project manager and transformation lead, your responsibilities will include:

- Coordinating and leading development and operations teams, aiding in defining, prioritising, and planning their activities.
- Managing and motivating team members, monitoring performance to ensure high-quality solutions that meet end-user and System Owner () expectations.
- Defining, reviewing, and adapting delivery methods tailored to project requirements, applying Project Management and Agile methodologies in alignment with relevant internal procedures and standards.
- Contributing to the delivery of standard project artifacts such as business cases, project charters, analysis documents, user stories, and software architecture documents.
- Ensuring information systems adhere to the Commission's digital strategy principles, promoting the reuse of corporate building blocks (European Union Institutions framework, EU Login) and architectural patterns when applicable.
- Implementing proper risk management, quality control, and security procedures, ensuring systematic adherence by teams.
- Providing regular progress reports to internal hierarchies and the System Owner, addressing encountered issues and managing stakeholder expectations.
- Developing mid- and long-term vision and roadmaps for the systems' evolution, translating them into annual work plans, and continuously modernising technology stacks while minimising technical debt.
- Managing budget, identifying resource needs, and overseeing contract management activities related to external service providers under framework contracts.

DIGIT.A.3 offers a dynamic working environment with strong team spirit and opportunities to work on large and important corporate information systems forming the backbone of the Commission's administrative functioning.
